Generosity make lunch program success

By Dan Frazier
Superintendent, Kwajalein Schools

The island community of Kwajalein is indeed a generous group of people. Over the summer, a call went out asking for donations in support of lunches for our guest students attending Kwajalein School from Ebeye. Since that initial request, more than $10,000 was raised, enough to support all guest students through the school year.

For well over a decade, Kwajalein School has admitted a group of guest students from Ebeye each year. The students commute over by barge every morning. Since the program was implemented in support of our host nation, a number of Marshallese children have graduated with a high school diploma from Kwajalein High School.

Again this year, Kwajalein School admitted five more students from Ebeye to its entering kindergarten class. This is a wonderful educational opportunity for these children. But unfortunately, they cannot go home for lunch. For several years now, Kwajalein School has provided lunch to these students through the generosity of private donors on the island.

The nutrition a child receives is a major factor in his or her academic achievement. Through the program, students receive a basic and well-rounded lunch, prepared by Kwajalein Range Services Dining Services. With the generous support of the Kwajalein community this year, our guest students will receive a special hot lunch each week with an entrée more suitable and pleasing to our guest student palate.

Several elementary teachers have been donating milk to the children. Now the PTO is also purchasing milk, and PLOPS is providing juice boxes so guest students may also enjoy a healthful drink with their lunch.

George Seitz Elementary will continue to accept donations to this program throughout the year. Call the school office at 53601 for more information.

Our sincere appreciation goes out to those people and groups who donated to the guest student lunch program. The list to date includes:

Meal card holders will get break at future mobile kitchen events

By Nell M. Drumheller
Editor

Employees with meal-card privileges will get a break at mobile-kitchen events according to Steve Cummings, Dining Services manager.

He said that meal-card carrying employees can use their card to eat the fried chicken dinner Monday at the Labor Day festivities on Emon Beach.

The mobile kitchen will be on site from 1 to 5 p.m. Meal-card holders must go to the Three Palms Snack Bar this week and get a ticket for the Monday beach meal.

Cummings said that in addition to the free Labor Day dining, meal-card holders can get a $5 discount on other mobile kitchen-related events such as the Sept. 10 Beach Blast at Coral Sands; the Sept. 17 Moonrise Grill at the Pacific Club and the Sept. 24 Sunset Bistro at Emon Beach. These events begin at 7 p.m. The regular ticket price is $25.

Cummings said that the mobile kitchen events have been popular and sell out quickly. He said that the best time to get tickets at the Three Palms Snack Bar is between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. and that interested parties should speak to a manager.

Cummings asks for the community's ideas for events. He said that the Sept. 10 Beach Blast will be a beach party theme and a tribute to Jim Morrison of the Doors and was a suggestion of an island resident. He added that people should put mobile-kitchen event ideas in the suggestion box at Three Palms.

Simple machine, major impact

Low-tech copier makes life easier at Jabro School

By Mig Owens
Assistant editor

For Imai Yea, teacher at Jabro School on Ebeye, the ability to make copies of tests is a luxury. Frequent power outages and the expense associated with cartridges for the school's copier are often prohibitive – forcing Yea to at times write her test questions on the board and ask the students to copy the information onto their papers.

Recently, the school received a donated solution from someone whose concern reached across the Pacific from the United States. Northrop-Grumman's Ed Trautman, based in Huntsville, Ala., heard about the need on Ebeye and used basic materials to create a low-tech duplicator that relies on people power instead of electricity.

The 'machine' uses a wood frame to hold a gellatin film. Using a pencil called a hektograph, teachers write on a plain piece of paper. Then, they place the paper face down on top of the gel, which absorbs the purple writing.

Copying involves placing a fresh sheet of paper onto the gel and rubbing until the writing transfers onto paper. The gel is reusable, and a blank slate is achieved by gently wiping it clean with a sponge and water.

Trautman, an old-technology enthusiast, explained that this process is not one that he invented, but simply replicated, as it was used prior to the invention of carbon paper.

Through coordination with Judy Kirchner, a former teacher on Kwajalein who devotes her time as a volunteer at Jabro School, the duplicator was delivered to the school just before the start of the school year.

"It takes 10 or 15 minutes to copy one test," Yea, who teaches a combined seventh and eighth-grade class of about 20 students, explained. "I don't mind, it's kind of fun – it exercises our fingers."

Now in demand at Jabro, teachers schedule amongst themselves for copy time on the duplicator.

Susan Rokobili, first-grade teacher, once created assignments in longhand for her 26 students. She estimates that the duplicator saves her as much as 20 minutes per task.

"It helps a lot," she said. "I want the kids to have handwriting [assignments] every day and now they do."

Jabro Principal Kirong Sam said she appreciates not only the convenience but the portability of the invention. Though the duplicator's home base is the school office, teachers are able to simply pick it up and use it in any of the preschool through twelfth-grade classrooms.

According to Kirchner, Trautman's goal is to build more low-tech duplicators to be given to schools on other islands, though finding the hektograph pencils is a challenge because the need for which they were developed no longer exists. Until now.

Unexploded ordnance destroyed during disposal operations on Illeginni Island

By Elizabeth Davie
Reporter

On Aug. 19, Explosive Ordnance Disposal and Launch Ordnance conducted a demolition operation on Illeginni Island.

The purpose of the operation was to dispose of unexploded ordnance that had been collected on Kwajalein. According to Daryl Satko, explosive ordnance disposal technician, more than 130 pounds of ordnance was disposed of including things such as firecrackers, rounds of ammunition and expired flares.

"The mission was to get rid of all the UXO found on Kwaj. All the items were detonated, we did not have to bring anything back," Satko said.

Satko explained that UXO items that are collected on Kwaj are stored in bunkers until enough items are accumulated to do a demolition operation.

The UXO were transported to Illeginni Island where technicians used 15 and a half blocks of C4 and 420 feet of detonating cord to dispose of the ordnance.

After the initial explosion, the EOD team leader for the operation goes down range to verify that there are no hazards. If something was not detonated, the team leader is equipped with additional C4 to finish the job, this is called a clean up shot, Satko explained.

"Everything went on the first shot, no clean up shot was needed," he said.

The EOD team will be conducting another operation on Sept. 15 and 16. The operation's purpose is to recover and detonate 33 each 155 projectiles that have been located off of Carlson Island. The projectiles will be detonated on Illeginni Island due to the fact it is an approved demolition site.

For more information on UXO or to report finding, call 51433.

Boxer sailors reach out to Majuro children

James Bartels

MAJURO, Republic of the Marshall Islands — Children of Marshall Islands received a special treat Aug. 26 when USS Boxer (LHD 4) sailors, decked out in their summer whites, stopped by to read to them during Boxer's visit to Majuro, the capital of the Republic of the Marshall Islands.

Sailors read to the children as part of the Marshall Islands' First Lady's "Learn to Read by Reading Out Loud" program. Along with reading stories, sailors passed out treats, stickers, played games and took time to talk to the children.

"I really appreciate how these sailors are helping our children," said Jabwill Ned, vice principal of Rita Elementary School. "It is very difficult to get English teachers to come to Majuro, so any exposure to the English language helps our students further their education."

Boxer sailors also gained from the experience. Many sailors felt privileged to lend a helping hand.

"I wanted to do what I could to make a difference," said Damage Controlman Fireman Griselda B. Bonilla, of Los Angeles. "The Marshall Islands are very secluded. It's great that we can expose the children to something they may have never experienced before."

Bonilla said the visit was a great experience for both the sailors and the schoolchildren. While the children enjoyed the readings by the "Golden Gator" crew members, the sailors walked away with a sense of pride and accomplishment.

"This was beneficial for all involved," said Cmdr. Robert D. Delis, of Oceanside, Calif., who is one of Boxer's two command chaplains. "We were able to not only provide a little joy, but also emphasize that no matter what the situation around you is, education is very important."

In addition to reading to students during Boxer's visit to Majuro, sailors and Marines provided medical and dental support, repaired dilapidated schoolrooms and buildings and gained firsthand experience of the Marshallese culture.
